

STA

- She flammers; oh what grace in lipping lies!
If she says nothing, to be sure she's wife.
Lagean juice, Dryden.
- Which flammering tongues and stagg'ring feet produce. Dryd.
Cornelius hoped he would come to flammer like De-mofthenes. Arbutn. Mart. Serib.
- Your hearers would rather you should be less correct, than perpetually flammering, which is one of the worst solecisms in rhetoric. Swift.
- STAMMERER. n. f. [from flammer.] One who speaks with hesitation.
- A flammerer cannot with moderation hope for the gift of tongues, or a peasant to become learned as Origen. Taylor.
- TO STAMP. v. a. [stampen, Dutch; stampen, Danish.]
1. To strike by pressing the foot hastily downwards.
If Arcite thus deplore
His suff'rings, Palamon yet suffers more:
He frets, he fumes, he flares, he stamps the ground;
The hollow tow'r with clamours rings around. Dryden.
2. To pound; to beat as in a mortar.
I took the calf you had made, burnt it with fire, and stamped and ground it very small. Deutr. ix. 21.
Some apothecaries, upon stamping of coloquintida, have been put into a great scouring by the vapour only. Bacon.
3. [Stampen, French; stampare, Italian; stampar, Spanish.]
To impress with some mark or figure.
Height of place is intended only to stamp the endowments of a private condition with lustre and authority. South.
- Here swells the shelf with Ogilby the great;
There, stamp'd with arms, Newcastle shines complete. Pope.
4. To fix a mark by impressing it.
Out of mere ambition, you have made
Your holy hat be stamp'd on the king's coin. Shakespeare.
- These prodigious conceits in nature spring out of framing abstracted conceptions, instead of those easy and primary notions which nature stamps alike in all men of common sense.
Digby on Bodies.
- There needs no positive law or sanction of God to stamp an obliquity upon such a disobedience. South's Sermons.
- No constant reason of this can be given, but from the nature of man's mind, which hath this notion of a deity born with it, and stamp'd upon it; or is of such a frame, that in the free use of itself it will find out God. Tillotson.
- Though God has given us no innate ideas of himself, though he has stamp'd no original characters on our minds, wherein we may read his being; yet having furnished us with those faculties our minds are endowed with, he hath not left himself without witnesses. Locke.
- Can they perceive the impressions from things without, and be at the same time ignorant of those characters which nature herself has taken care to stamp within? Locke.
- What titles had they had, if nature had not Strove hard to thrust the worst deserving first,
And stamp'd the noble mark of eldership
Upon their baser metal? Rowe's Ambitious Step-mother.
- What an unspeakable happiness would it be to a man engaged in the pursuit of knowledge, if he had but a power of stamping his best sentiments upon his memory in indelible characters? Watts.
5. To make by impressing a mark.
If two penny weight of silver, marked with a certain impression, shall here in England be equivalent to three penny weight marked with another impression, they will not fail to stamp pieces of that fashion, and quickly carry away your silver. Locke.
6. To mint; to form; to coin.
We are bastards all;
And that most venerable man, which I did call my father, was I know not where
When I was stamp'd. Shakespeare. Cymbeline.
- TO STAMP. v. n. To strike the foot suddenly downward.
What a fool art thou,
A ramping fool, to brag, to stamp, and swear,
Upon my party! Thou cold-blooded slave, Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side? Shakespeare.
- The men shall howl at the noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his strong horses. Jer. xlvii. 3.
- There is such an echo among the old ruins and vaults, that, if you stamp but a little louder than ordinary, you hear the sound repeated. Addison's Spectator.
- He cannot bear th' astonishing delights,
But starts, exclaims, and stamps, and raves and dies. Dennis.
- They got to the top, which was flat and even, and stamping upon it, they found it was hollow. Gulliver's Travels.
- STAMP. n. f. [stampen, French; stampa, Italian.]
1. Any instrument by which a hollow impression is made.
Some other nymphs, with colours faint
And pencil slow, may Cupid paint;
And a weak heart in time destroy
She has a stamp, and prints the boy. Waller.

STA

- 'Tis gold so pure,
It cannot bear the stamp without alloy. Dryden.
2. A mark set on any thing; impression.
That sacred name gives ornament and grace,
And, like his stamp, makes basest metals pass;
'Twere folly now a stately pile to raise,
To build a playhouse, while you throw down plays. Dryd.
- Idea is imprinted on the memory; some by an object affecting the senses only; others, that have more than once offered themselves, have yet been little taken notice of; the mind, intent only on one thing, not settling the stamp deep into itself. Locke.
3. A thing marked or stamped.
The mere despair of surgery he cures;
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers. Shakespeare. Macbeth.
4. A picture cut in wood or metal; a picture made by impression;
a cut; a plate.
At Venice they put out very curious stamps of the several edifices, which are most famous for their beauty and magnificence. Addison on Italy.
5. A mark set upon things that pay customs to the government.
Indeed the paper stamp
Did very much his genius cramp;
And since he could not spend his fire,
He now intended to retire. Swift.
6. A character of reputation, good or bad, fixed upon any thing.
The persons here reflected upon are of such a peculiar stamp of impiety, that they seem formed into a kind of diabolical society for the finding out new experiments in vice. South.
- Where reason or scripture is exprest for any opinion, we may receive it as of divine authority; but it is not the strength of our own persuasions which can give it that stamp. Locke.
7. Authority; currency; value derived from any suffrage or attestation.
Of the same stamp is that which is obtruded upon us, that an adamant suspends the attraction of the loadstone. Brown.
- The common people do not judge of vice or virtue by morality, or the immorality, so much as by the stamp that is set upon't by men of figure. L'Estrange.
8. Make; cast; form.
If speaking truth
In this fine age were not thought flattery,
Such attribution should this Douglas have, as that
As not a soldier of this season's stamp Should go so general current through the world. Shakespeare.
- When one man of an exemplary improbity charges another of the same stamp in a court of justice, he lies under the disadvantage of a strong suspicion. L'Estrange.
- Let a friend to the government relate to him a matter of fact, he gives him the lie in every look; but if one of his own stamp should tell him that the king of Sweden would be suddenly at Perth, he hugs himself at the good news. Addison.
- STAMPER. n. f. [from stamp.] An instrument of pounding.
From the stamping-mill it passeth through the crazing-mill;
but of late times they mostly use wet stampers. Carew.
- STAN, amongst our forefathers, was the termination of the superlative degree: so Atthelstan, most noble; Beistan, the best; Leofstan, the dearest; Wistan, the wisest; Donstan, the highest. Gifford's Conden.
- TO STANCH. v. a. [stancher, French; stanchare, Italian.] To stop blood; to hinder from running.
Iron or a stone, laid to the neck, doth stanch the bleeding of the nose. Bacon's Natural History.
- Of veins of earth medicinal are terra lemmia, terra sigillata, communis, and bolus armenus; whereof terra lemmia is the chief: the virtues of them are for curing of wounds, stanching of blood, and stopping of fluxes and rheums. Bacon.
- Leeches, inwardly taken, fasten upon the veins, and occasion an effusion of blood, which cannot be easily stanch'd.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.
- He fought to hinder fighting, and ally'd
To stanch blood by breathing of the vein. Dryden.
- TO STANCH. v. n. To stop.
A woman touch'd the hem of his garments, and immediately her issue stanch'd. Lu. viii. 44.
- STANCH. adj. [This seems to come from the verb.]
1. Sound; such as will not run out.
What we endeavour'd in vain may be performed by some virtuoso, that shall have stancher vessels, and more sunny days.
2. Firm; found of principle; trusty; hearty; determined.
The standing absurdity, without the belief of which no man is reckoned a stanch churchman, is that there is a calf's-head club. Prior.
- In politics, I hear, you're stanch, Directly bent against the French. Dryden.
- Each stanch polemic stubborn as a rock,
Each fierce logician still expelling Locke, Dunciad.
- Came whip and spur. Dryden.

STA

3. Strong; not to be broken.
If I knew
What hoop would hold us stanch from edge to edge
O' th' world, I would pursue it. Shak. Ant. and Cleopatra.
- You will lose their love: this is to be kept stanch, and carefully watched. Locke.
- STANCHION. n. f. [stanchon, French.] A prop; a support.
STANCHLESS. adj. [from stanch.] Not to be stopped.
There grows
In my most ill compos'd affection, such
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands. Shakespeare. Macbeth.
- TO STAND. v. n. preterite I stood, I have stood. [stāban, Gothick and Saxon; stāns, Dutch; stare, Italian; stare, Spanish; stare, Latin.]
1. To be upon the feet; not to fit or lie down.
2. To be not demolished or overthrown.
What will they then? what but unbuild
A living temple, built by faith to stand? Milton.
3. To be placed as an edifice.
This poet's tomb stood on the other side of Naples, which looks towards Vesuvio. Addison on Italy.
4. To remain erect; not to fall.
Chariot and charioteer lay overturn'd,
And fiery foaming steeds: what flood, recoil'd O'erwear'd, through the faint fatanick host Defensive scarce, or with pale fear surpris'd Fled ignominious. Milton's Paradise Lost.
5. To become erect.
The rooted fibres rose, and from the wound
Black bloody drops distill'd upon the ground:
Mute, and amaz'd, my hair with horror stood;
Fear thrunk my senses, and congeal'd my blood.
Her hair stood up; convulsive rage possess'd
Her trembling limbs. Dryden's Æn.
6. To stop; to halt; not to go forward.
The leaders, having charge from you to stand,
Will not go off until they hear you speak. Shakespeare. H. VI.
- Sun in Gideon stand,
And thou moon in the vale of Ajalon. Milton.
- Mortal, who this forbidden path
In arms presum'st to tread, I charge thee stand,
And tell thy name. Dryden's Æn.
7. To be at a stationary point without progress or regression.
This nation of Spain runs a race still of empire, when all other states of Christendom stand at a stay. Bacon.
- Immense the pow'r, immense were the demand;
Say, at what part of nature will they stand? Pope.
8. To be in a state of firmness, not vacillation.
Commonwealths by virtue ever stood.
To stand or fall,
Free in thine own arbitrement it lies.
My mind on its own centre stands unmov'd,
And stable as the fabric of the world,
Propt on itself. Dryden.
9. To be in any posture of resistance or defence.
Seeing how lothly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion
With his prepared sword he charges home
My unprovided body. Shakespeare. King Lear.
- From enemies heav'n keep your majesty;
And when they stand against you, may they fall. Shakespeare.
10. To be in a state of hostility; to keep the ground.
If he would presently yield, Barbarossa promised to let him go free; but if he should stand upon his defence, he threatened to make him repent his foolish hardiness. Knolles.
- The king granted the Jews to gather themselves together, and stand for their life. Esth. viii. 11.
- We are often contrain'd to stand alone against the strength of opinion. Brown's Preface to Vulgar Errors.
- It was by the sword they should die, if they stood upon defence; and by the halter, if they should yield. Heyward.
11. Not to yield; not to fly; not to give way.
Who before him stood so to it? for the Lord brought his enemies unto him. Eccles. xlvii. 3.
- Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. Eph. vi. 11.
12. To stand; to be firm; to be steady.
Their lives and fortunes were put in safety, whether they stood to it or ran away. Bacon's Henry VII.
13. To stand; to be firm; to be steady.
At the soldierly word stand the flyers halted a little. Clarend.
14. To be placed with regard to rank or order.
Amongst liquids endued with this quality of relaxing, warm water stands first. Arbutnot on Aliments.
- Theology would truly enlarge the mind, were it studied with that freedom and that sacred charity which it teaches: let this therefore stand always chief. Watts.
15. To remain in the present state.
If meat make my brother offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth. 1 Cor. viii. 13.
- That fots and knaves should be so vain
To wish their vile resemblance may remain;

STA

- And stand recorded, at their own request,
To future days a libel or a jest. Dryden.
15. [Estar, Spanish.] To be in any particular state; to be: emphatically expressed.
The sea,
Aw'd by the rod of Moses so to stand, Divided. Milton.
- Accomplish what your signs foreshow:
I stand resign'd, and am prepar'd to go. Dryden's Æn.
- He struck the snakes, and stood again
New sex'd, and strait recover'd into man. Addison.
- They expect to be favoured, who stand not possessed of any one of those qualifications that belonged to him. Atterbury.
- Some middle prices shew us in what proportion the value of their lands stood, in regard to those of our own country. Arbuth.
- God, who sees all things intuitively, does not want these helps: he neither stands in need of logic nor uses it. Baker.
- Perfians and Greeks like turns of nature found,
And the world's victor stood subdu'd by found. Pope.
- Narrow capacities, imagining the great capable of being disconcerted by little occasions, frame their malignant fables accordingly, and stand detected by it, as by an evident mark of ignorance. Pope's Essay on Homer.
16. Not to become void; to remain in force.
God was not ignorant that the judges, whose sentence in matters of controversy he ordained should stand, oftentimes would be deceived. Hooker.
- A thing within my bosom tells me,
That no conditions of our peace can stand. Shakespeare. H. IV.
- I will punish you, that ye may know that my words shall surely stand against you for evil. Jer. xlv. 29.
- My mercy will I keep for him, and my covenant shall stand fast with him. Ps. lxxxix. 28.
17. To consist; to have its being or essence.
That could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience, which stood only in meats and drinks. Heb. ix. 10.
18. To be with respect to terms of a contract.
The hirelings stand at a certain wages. Carew.
19. To have a place.
If it stand
Within the eye of honour, be assured
My purse, my person, my extremest means,
Lie all unlock'd to your occasions. Shak. Merch. of Venice.
- My very enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night Against my fire. Shakespeare. King Lear.
- A philosopher disputed with Adrian the emperor, and did it but weakly: one of his friends, that stood by, said, Methinks you were not like yourself last day in argument with the emperor; I could have answered better myself. Why, said the philosopher, would you have me contend with him that commands thirty legions? Bacon.
- This excellent man, who stood not upon the advantage-ground before, provoked men of all qualities. Clarendon.
- Chariots wing'd
From th' armoury of God, where stand of old Myriads. Milton.
- We make all our addresses to the promises, hug and caress them, and in the interim let the commands stand by neglected. Decay of Piety.
20. To be in any state at the time present.
Opprest nature sleeps:
This rest might yet have balm'd th' broken senses,
Which stand in hard cure. Shak. King Lear.
- So it stands; and this I fear at last,
Hume's knavery will be the dutchess' wreck. Shak. H. VI.
- Our company assembled, I said, My dear friends, let us know ourselves, and how it stands with us. Bacon.
- Gardiner was made king's solicitor, and the patent, formerly granted to Saint-John, stood revoked. Clarendon.
- Why stand we longer shivering under fears? Milton.
- As things now stand with us, we have no power to do good after that illustrious manner our Saviour did. Calamy's Serm.
21. To be in a permanent state.
The broil doubtful long stood,
As two spent swimmers that do cling together,
And choke their art. Shakespeare.
- I in thy persevering shall rejoice,
And all the blest stand fast. Milton.
22. To be with regard to condition or fortune.
I stand in need of one whose glories may Redeem my crimes, ally me to his fame. Dryden.
23. To have any particular respect.
Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon
To stand's auspicious mistress. Shakespeare. King Lear.
- An utter unfashionable disobedience has to the relation which man necessarily stands in towards his Maker. South.
24. To be without action.
25. To depend; to rest; to be supported.
This reply standeth all by conjectures. Whitegiste.